How will Trump's new "NAFTA" impact New England energy prices, supplies this winter?

Keynote speaker Dr. Ernest Moniz, former U.S. Energy Secretary, will be among experts covering the changes in the energy market on both sides of the border at:

the 26th Annual U.S.-Canada Energy Trade & Technology Conference Nov. 1-2 in Boston

Organized by the New England – Canada Business Council (NECBC), the conference will host North America's leading policy leaders, public utility executives and energy technology authorities.

Coverage is invited

When: Thursday, November 1, 1:00 to 5:30 p.m.
Friday, November 2, 8:15 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Where: Seaport Hotel, Boston, MA

Conference theme:

"Envisioning Our Cross-Border Energy Future"

The NECBC's Annual Energy Trade & Technology Conference is a major cross-border energy conference in North America, attracting over 250 industry and government leaders.

Talks will focus on opportunities and constraints in cross-border energy exchanges such as:

- Impact of revised NAFTA trade agreement, and steel and aluminum tariffs, on U.S.-Canada trade relations and market investment
- Proposed electricity exports from Canada to New England
- Clean-tech energy technologies, including offshore wind and energy storage
- Challenges of meeting system reliability and environmental goals.
